MORRISVILLE'S BUDGET

Weekly Review of Affairs in the Thriving Borough as Gleaned by Our Special Correspondent.

Morrisville has at last a real hose company, one in which the town can be proud of. When the company was first organized it was thought that it would not amount to much as interest would soon die out, but on the contrary, it has increased and today the company is a live, wide-awake organization.

Since the company was formed the building has been overhauled and the apparatus has been repaired and overhauled. The membership is constantly increasing and with the contributing members on the list, the company will be able to get along very nicely.

The company purchased another hose carriage from the Trenton fire department and now will be able to branch out which will be done shortly.

The hose cart which the company had will be placed at Morris Heights in a building which Thomas B. Stockham will have built at his own expense. This will afford better protection at that end of town as the hose carriage with the hose will be there all the time. The hose carriage which has just been purchased will be placed in the fire house.

The company is about to ask Council to allow it to enlarge the building and after it is enlarged the company will, very likely have the use of two horses at night to use for fire purposes, through the kindness of Thomas B. Stockham.

President W. S. Cox is certainly very much interested in the company as he seems to spend all his spare time working around the fire house. Many of the other members are also seen working around the fire house. What is wanted now is the hearty support of all the citizens. Join the company as a contributing member as we want the company to stay and we want it to give us first-class protection and all is asked is a little co-operation, which can be given very easily.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETING.

The Board of Education met Monday evening and elected one new teacher and made a number of changes. The board held a special meeting some time ago and straightened out the teaching force, electing two new teachers, but one of these resigned on account of ill-health and one of the teachers of last year, who was re-elected, resigned to go to Sharon Hill, N. J.

The fact that lunatics seem to like Morrisville was revealed last week, when within a week two unknown men wandered into town at different times apparently demented. The first invader of this character was an Italian giving his name as John Pierie, of Philadelphia, and he was taken to Norristown, after being declared insane by a commission composed of Dr. Wetmore, Lewis R. Bond, Esq., and William G. Howell, Esq. The latest invader was a man who gave his name as Charles Pierson, but could apparently give no further account of himself. He was also sent to Norristown after being declared insane by L. R. Bond, Esq., Dr. Kunsman and Justice of Peace B. F. Taylor.

Matthew Gants was committed to the County Jail on Tuesday charged with assault and battery on his wife, striking an officer and breaking a water pipe in the lock-up and flooding the place. He was held in $800 bail by Justice of Peace Taylor. Constable Peze made the arrest. Gants is an old timer before the Court, charged with the same offence, and he will likely get a good dose this time.

District Deputy Sheppard, of Bristol, and his staff, installed the new officers of Ancient Castle, No. 135, Ancient Order Knights of Mystic Chain, Monday evening, in their hall here. It was a covered wagon and this alone saved Johnson's life. Numerous trees were uprooted and quite some damage was done by this.

The supper, which was recently given on Charles T. Eastburn's lawn by the Woman's Auxiliary of the Boys' Club for the benefit of the building fund, resulted in clearing the debt on the boys' rooms. These rooms are now the property of the Yardley Boys' Club, and improvements will be made from time to time.

Harry Mathers and Thomas Barnhardt had a narrow escape from drowning on Saturday night, when in the darkness their naptha launch struck a boulder and capsized. The young men were going up stream at a lively clip when their boat struck a rock and overturned. They were thrown out into the water and found swimming with difficulty, owing to the weight of their shoes and garments. When the men finally succeeded in getting under way by swimming, they found their craft was several hundred yards down the stream. It is high time some of our club people, base ball players and Sunday carousers have been notified to observe the Sabbath more closely. The disorderly conduct as has heretofore been tolerated by our citizens is more than disgusting. We think if it is necessary to have such congregating on the Sabbath, that they be conducted with all the propriety possible so as to be in harmony with the keeping of this holy day. We see no reason why our town shou d be disgraced and its tranquility disturbed by a set of disrespectors of God and man and think the authorities should take the greatest precautions to look into these affairs out of respect for the people who do wish to respect the Sabbath.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Newportville Union Sunday School:

"Whereas, The wisdom of Almighty God has seen fit to remove in the youthful promise of life, our little friend, Mamie S. Webster, and

Whereas, In our midst she was ever an earnest worker in our Sunday School and a loyal friend to all, and

Whereas, We all recognize in her the influence of a gentle and winning personality, therefore be it

"Resolved, That in her death we feel a real loss and sadness that only the departure of a loved and faithful child can bring,

"Resoved, That we extend to the bereaved family our sincerest sympathy, be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent them and also that they be published in the local papers.

Cornwells should have a volunteer fire company for the protection of the people and homes in this community. The recent fire in Eddington should be a warning to us. If the wind had been in the other direction several houses would probably have been destroyed. It is a good precaution to keep extra buckets filled with water in the house. "A stitch in time saves nine." Holmesburg and Bristol are the nearest fire companies. Let the citizens of Eddington, Conwells and Andalusia organize a local fire company.

We do not class ourselves among the admirers of Miss Marie Corelli as a novelist, though we know of many excellent people who do. To us she is often too intense, overwrought in feeling. But we believe she is clean and pure of spirit, which is a good deal to be valued now-a-days and she certainly has power for strong characterization and vivid presentation which are not to be lightly estimated. There are two of her books in the King Library, "The Master Christian" and "God's Good Man." The latter is a very sweet story of English country life and the former also a book of real interest.

A delightful moonlight ride on the Delaware was the happy lot of the St. Agnes Altar Guild of the Chapel of the Redeemer, on Monday evening last. Falls Township Entanglement.

Following five legal entanglements in a vain endeavor to settle their differences concerning the ownership of farm products and two arrests for trespass in connection with the matters, Mrs. Mary J. Goudy, Robert Langdon and Frank S. Hibbs, of Falls township, have agreed to abide by the decision of arbitrators. Willis Wall and William C. Ryan have been named.

Hibbs, who was a tenant on the Langdon farm, is alleged to have refused to give possession of the place and to have seeded two-thirds of the tract before he finally vacated. Hibbs maintains the landlord did not live up to the agreement entered into in not furnishing a quantity of fertilizer.

A few days ago Hibbs caused the arrest of Mrs. Goudy for trespass and a counter suit was immediately instituted against Hibbs for assault. The warrants were issued by Justice White, of Yardley.

Flavoring Tobacco.

Nearly all tobaccos are doctored in various ways in order to suit the tastes of different consumers. Each manufacturer—even in Havana—has his own secret methods, handed down from father to son, which are regarded as perfectly legitimate and necessary. In the preparation of the soothing weed Saltpeter is added to the tobacco to make it burn well, licorice, honey, molasses and maple sugar to give sweetness to it for the special benefit of chewers and rum to make it keep well and preserve its properties. Nearly every plant which will afford a perfume is used in the preparation of what are known as "fancy" tobaccos. But it is not true, as some suppose, that opium and deleterious drugs are employed, save in a few brands of imported Turkish and Egyptian cigarettes. Among the flavors used are coffee, tea, valerian, lemon, orange, geranium, sassafras, thyme, anise, mint and cinnamon. Gum and glycerin are occasionally employed to bind the tobacco particles so that they shall not crumble into dust. The various ingredients are made into a kind of sauce, into which the tobacco leaves are dipped or with which they are sprinkled.—London Answers

The Proper Adjective.

At the close of a revival service in Philadelphia the minister of the church went down the aisle, according to his custom, to greet the strangers in the congregation. "I don't think you are a member of our church," said he to one as he warmly shook his hand. "No, sir," replied the stranger. "Well, you will not think me unduly curious if I ask to what denomination you belong?" asked the minister. "I suppose," responded the other, "I'm really what you might call a submerged Presbyterian." "A submerged Presbyterian?" exclaimed the minister. "I should be glad if you would explain." "Well, I was brought up a Presbyterian, my wife is a Methodist, my eldest daughter is a Baptist, my son is the organist at a Unitarian church, my second daughter sings in an Episcopal choir, and my youngest goes to a Congregational Sunday school." "But" said the minister, aghast, "you contribute doubtless to some church?" "Yes; I contribute to all of them," was the answer. "That's what submerges me."

Crows and Strings.

It was proved centuries ago that a crow can count up to three and no more. I met a farmer once who said that his corn crop had not failed in twenty years owing to his habit of stringing his field. He explained. "No crow will enter an angle formed by two strings stretched on poles. I illustrated this to some friends several years ago by sowing a small field in corn for fodder, protecting it by a zigzag string running from one end to the other. Within the angles formed by the string not a blade of the young crop was touched, but close without them, at each end, the whole crop was demolished. A crow is a very wise fool, and this is an effective and cheap way of circumventing him."—New York Press.

Advantage of Credit.

"My big sister has a beau."

"So's mine, but I don't like him."

"Know what my sister 'd do if I didn't like her beau?"

"No. What'd she do?"

"She'd send him back and get him changed, 'cause we've got a charge account at the store he comes from."—Newark Evening Star.

Different Opinions.

"I see a man intends to let a rattlesnake bite him and depend on prayer for a cure. I call that faith."

"I call it cruelty to animals unless somebody's going to pray for the snake after it's bitten such a fool as that."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Letter From Bala.

We are not responsible for the statements of our correspondents but try to explain them as well as we can and do not reject anonymous communications.

"Milton attended no church, belonged to no religious denomination and had no family."—X. Y. Z.

Milton was blind and so far helpless from the age of 46 until his death (twenty years). He was married three times and had three daughters who did not treat him kindly. If he wanted to have prayers they made a racket and he was obliged to give it up. If he tried to go to church they locked the door and he could not get out. It was impossible for him to belong to any religious denomination but theirs. They made themselves agreeable both by their attentions to him and by constant quarrels with their stepmother, besides this, being distressed by political troubles (he was formerly Secretary of State during the Commonwealth). He sought refuge from everything in the composition of Paradise Lost and thus became, as it were, a preacher to the universe hoping that posterity would appreciate him. These facts may in part explain the statements of "X. Y. Z."

"Tennyson had a voice musical, metallic, fit for loud laughter or piercing wail."—Thomas Carlyle.

If this be the case Tennyson was a real hyena or else you are a lunatic.

"Browning scrawled poetry when he was eight years old."—One of his admirers.

The scribbling is all right but we don't believe in the poetry.

"Patti sometimes received $5000 a night for singing. She was not willing as I was to do a man's work for half a man's wages and I was almost as good a singer as she was."—Jenny Lind.

All right, Jenny, we will see that you are paid better the next time you come round.

"I live now in a magnificent castle in the South of Wales and am worth three million dollars. My third husband and everybody worship me. When I receive, nobody dares to sit down until I have taken my seat. I would like you to come over and see me sometime and bring everybody in the Home with you. I will sing for you for I can sing still."—Patti.

Thank you, Patti, we will be over without fail.

"Washington had but one tooth left and in that one he had a toothache."—Anon.

Pretty soon Washington won't have any teeth.

"Newton never wore spectacles and never lost but one tooth."—Anon.

Probably the one he lost was to replace the one of Washington's that ached.

"Mary Barton has been published by the Century Company in the series called 'The English Comedie Humaine,' a series in which none but the masterpieces of literature appear."—Mrs. Gaskell.

Thank you, we have been looking for it a long while. It is in our opinion the greatest novel in the English language

"Robert Southey wrote every day from nine o'clock in the morning until noon. He corrected proofs throughout the afternoon, and in the evening he made memoranda for new works, but out of all his epics, poems, satires and histories which he thought would live forever, there remains practically nothing except the little nursery classic known to every child as the 'Three Bears.'"—Munsey's Magazine.

It is fortunate that biography is omitted from this list. Does not Munsey know the life of Nelson is a classic and published and read in preference to any other. "It is beautiful" is the universal verdict and it will live as long as any one has any interest in Nelson and as for satire is not Southey preserved in the great satire "Vision of Judgment" not in a way we like but in a way to make everyone ask "Who was Southey?" but Nelson's life preserves him as the true and noble man he was.

"Byron's bedroom at Newstead remains just as he left it. On the walls hang engravings of Cambridge and portraits of his boxing master. The faded chintz curtains of the four-post bed are what once sheltered him. The satin upholstering of the chairs now colorless, is that on which he sat."—Munsey's Magazine.

And the wash stand we see over in the corner contains the basin in which he washed his face and hands and there is the tooth brush stand and the slop jar and—no further remarks are necessary. There are a hundred per cent. more visitors to the "Bonnie Bank of Doon" than there are either to "Abbottsford" or "Stratford on Avon." How many there are in proportion to Newstead Abbey we do not know but there are a great many—many foreigners and many Americans, but few we think English. The Countess Guiccioli was there about 1870 and when she saw the Phillips portrait she burst into tears.

Death of Newtown Citizen.

George C. Blackfan, one of the most highly repsected and influential residents of Newtown, died at his residence on Chancellor street, on Friday afternoon after an illness which had confined him to his bed for one week. The deceased was in his 73rd year and is survived by his wife, Lavinia Worstall Blackfan, and one son, John Blackfan, of Newtown. During his early life Mr. Blackfan resided on a farm in Wrightstown township, but since 1880 has lived in Newtown. He was a life-long member of the Society of Friends and has also been prominently identified with the various corporations for the improvement of the town, being at the time of his death a director of the First National Bank, Newtown Artesian Water Company, Building and Loan Association, and a former director of the Newtown Electric Light and Trolley Company and he has been president of the Wrightstown Turnpike Company for several years.

Truthful Reports

Bristol Reads Them with Uncommon Interest.

A Bristol citizen tells his experience in the following statement. No better evidence than this can be had. The truthful reports of friends and neighbors is the best proof in the world. Read and be convinced.

Mrs. Samuel Holt, living at 549 Swain street, Bristol, Pa., says: "It was only a short time after Mr. Holt began using Doan's Kidney Pills that a change was apparent in his general health. He had suffered for so long with kidney trouble and had tried so many remedies without finding relief that he began to believe a cure was impossible. The kidney secretions had been so irregular in action that he was obliged to get up several times during the night. They were also unnatural in appearance, and when allowed to stand, contained a sediment. His back was also very weak and he could scarcely bend over. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at E. C. Erthal's drug store, helped him almost at once. The secretions became regular, he soon felt stronger, and better in every way, and never misses an opportunity in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills to others."

THE COUNTY CAPITAL

The News of the Week in Doylestown as Gathered by Our Special Correspondent.

Doylestown, July 14, 1908.

Always original and striking in his expression, Game Commissioner Arthur Chapman, of this place, made a statement to the Gazette correspondent a few days ago which will be read with interest by gunners in the county and elsewhere.

Mr. Chapman said "The idea of taxing gunners $1 a year is all wrong. It goes against the grain not because of the amount, but because it smacks of foreign countries and customs. This game trouble comes from the fact that hunting is getting to be like fishing. The woods are full of gunners, but the real hunters are few. The idea of the gunners nowadays is to get out and kill something, anything and anyway. They don't stick to the rules of the game as they did years ago. I can remember the time when there was no need for a law to stop men from shooting into a covey of quail on the ground. Hunters in those days would as soon have thought of breaking their guns over a rock. The hunter who did it would have been ruled out. At the bottom of the dissappearance of game in this country is the breech-loading gun. Pass a law that only a muzzle-loading gun may be used in the pursuit of game and we will have plenty of game to shoot, for then only the real sportsmen would get after it. All that is needed to make a hunter now is a breech-loading gun and a pocket full of cartridges.

OFFICER FARLEY AROUSED.

Aroused by the many mean attacks made upon him since he began to enforce the automobile laws by direction of Town Council, Officer P. B. Farley had a capias issued, Saturday, for G. F. Epigraves, a Philadelphian, who while stopping here for a few days sent a letter containing a number of nasty insinuations to a local paper which published it. The officer asked $500 damages for libel, and he is being upheld by the majority of residents in his stand. Just a few residents had joined with autoists in denouncing the officer, who was only doing as he was directed by Council, and against their direct charges of graft and other indignities he had but on course to take. It is hardly necessary to say that they have quieted—really, subsided altogether.

SOME CHANGE; SOME DON'T.

Before the Denver convention nominated Bryan for the Presidency there were out-spoken expressions from many Democrats of this vicinity against the Nebraskan. Since then the Gazette correspondent has found by a canvas, some of them have changed their tune and decided to support him—but there are a number who won't.

County Chairman W. S. Long says Bryan is the man and that he will strengthen the county ticket.

Ex-Judge Yerkes side-steps by saying he hasn't read the platform.

John O. James says he is not a Bryan man, but will vote for the ticket.

As for enthusiasm there is none, while on the other hand James Fitzgerald, of Mechanicsville, says: "Unless Mr. Bryan changes he would be a propotype of Roosevelt, if elected President, and a successful imitator of the German Emperor."

MILLION DOLLAR MORTGAGE.

"Great Heavens!" The exclamation came from an official in the Recorder's office in the Court House, Friday, as his eyes fell upon the amount of a mortgage which had just been handed in to be recorded. It was for a million dollars—$1,000,000—and was given by the Standard Cast Iron Pipe & Foundry Company, of Bristol, to the Girard Trust Company, of Philadelphia. Upon this mortgage the trust company will issue bonds, bearing 5 per cent interest, $25,000 redeemable annually.

One million dollars! Yum! Yum!

AUTOISTS TO TEST LAW.

Automobilists connected with the Quaker City Motor Club of Philadelphia will test the validity of the automobile act in the Bucks county courts, and drivers of the buzz wagons all over the State will be intensely interested in a suit started here for that purpose, Monday, by Attorney G. D. Bartlett for George H. Smith, of the Q. C. M. C., who was a victim of Constable C. C. Haldeman's vigilance in Plumstead township.

Constable Haldeman's activity in taking up automobilists for not blowing their horns at a road crossing in his township is the bottom of the suit, and speaking of it, yesterday, to the Gazette correspondent he said:

"The officers' prosecutions have been persecutions. We intend to see whether the act is constitutional, more especially the part relating to the sounding of an alarm at street or road crossings."

THREE VETERAN COUNCILMEN.

Doylestown has three Borough Fathers who were members of Town Council a fifth of a century ago and one of them is very near to a point where he can celebrate the silver anniversary of his continuous service in the board.

These men are President J. Harrison Wilson, Republican, of the First Ward, and John G. Randall and Charles D. Bigley, Democrats of the Second Ward. Mr. Wilson has been elected eight consecutive terms and next year will run out twenty-four years of continuous service, nearly all of that time as a member of the most important committees.

John G. Randall, the dean in point of age, has been the Law Giver of the Law Givers of the body for many years, but his service has not been continuous. Being of an aggressive nature he has been in many Councilmanic scraps, and is a battle-scarred veteran with a fund of reminiscences of many of the most interesting events in the last twenty years of the borough's history. He is the author of the plan of making a public sale of borough bonds, and many of the public papers of Council were the children of his pen.

Councilman Bigley started his career as a borough father twenty years ago, but his term of services covers just thirteen years. He had the distinction of being hauled from a bed of sickness to vote on a fight over a trolley ordinance.

BIG BOUT FOR BODDLE.

Yesterday twenty-three years after he was made trustee of the estate of his brother, Lewis A. Reeder, who died in Montana, Houston T. Reeder, of Penn's Park, was made to disgorge several thousand dollars of the money he held to two of the heirs, Orlenzo C. Reeder and Rynaldo Reeder, of Newtown township, his nephews.

Under the will Houston T. Reeder, a gigantic man in stature and quite advanced in age, was trustee of the estate valued at about $100,000 to be distributed among a few heirs. Some of this money the heirs admit getting, but Orlenzo C. Reeder, a nephew of the trustee, brought suit last week to recover one-seventh part of $50,000 which he claimed was realized by H. T. Reeder from the sale of lots in Butte, Montana, which he attempted to keep by fraud, alleging that the land was taken from him by miners, although investigations showed that he realized about $6,000 from the sale of the land.

Reeder fought the nephew bitterly for many years, but last week a civil suit was started and after a charge of embezzlement was brought, he weakened, after being in the County Jail, and finally agreed to a settlement by paying Orlenzo and Rynaldo several thousands of dollars.

After doing this he explained that they had not understood his position. "It was this way," said the uncle in a statement. "In dividing the property some of the heirs took money from the sales of lots and money that I had borrowed, while others took city lots. George W. Reeder and Willis Reeder took some of the lots in Helena and I took two lots in Butte as a portion of my share. These Butte lots, therefore, were just as much mine as the lots taken by the others were their property. The difference was that my lots increased in value on my hands."

The heirs in bringing the suits claimed that they had every reason to believe that the old man intended to get out of the country with the money.

THE V. I. A.

Not many weeks ago the Gazette gave an account of the Doylestown V. I. A., an organization of women which devotes its attention to matters pertaining to the welfare of the borough. The work is still going on. At a recent meeting it was reported that the charity committee has assisted a number of destitute families, whose troubles came from sickness and the idleness of the husbands. The Sunshine Committee has had charge of service at the County Almshouse. A new street sprinkler has been purchased, waste paper boxes have been maintained about the town and the refuse matter has been collected from the streets periodically. Now the association has branched off by appointing an educational committee, but its duties have not been made public.

GIRL PITCHER COMING.

Sports of this place are looking forward to the much-heralded coming of Miss Carrie Moyer, of Macungie, the great girl pitcher, who will do the twirling for the Reformed Sunday School against the Brotherhood at the picnic at Willow Grove, July 23d. Miss Moyer was a member of Pastor Sippie's church before he came here and is now a student at the Women's College at Frederick, Md. Miss Moyer's pitching is not a joke, nor the result of newspaper puffs. She delivers the goods in the shape of a speedy curved ball, and knows the game from the word "go," although with it all she is decidedly womanly.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY MEETING.

All arrangements have been made for the Bucks County Historical Society's mid-summer meeting to be held at Tohickon Park on July 21st.

Charles M. Meredith, editor of the Central News, Perkasie, will present a paper on "The 'Spirit' Colony at Parkland," B. F. Fackenthall, Jr., of Riegelsville, a paper on "Henry Quin, Author of 'The Temple of Reason;'" Dr. J. Ernest Scott, of New Hope, on "The Old Shad Fisheries Along the Delaware River," and Warren S. Ely, librarian of the Historical Society, of Doylestown, will present a paper on a local history topic.

The meeting will be of the character of a picnic outing, with basket luncheon.

Lest We Forget.

"Bucks county Republicans generally have no use for Senator Penrose, they consider him a Senatorial misfit, and the prime cause for all the Republican woes that exist. There will never be peace in the Republican party of Bucks until Penrose is removed. No half way pledge will be taken by the people; they have been fooled before. 'DOWN WITH PENROSE,' should be the party slogan next year, and if the party leaders are wise (even though some of them are Federal officeholders), they will see that the slogan is given on the party banner in 1909. Nothing else will do, nothing else will save the party from defeat."—Weekly Courier, Bristol.

CONVENTION CONTRASTS.

The recent Republican National Convention held at Chicago, caused some of the "old timers" to complain of the latter-day direct voting system by which delegates are elected to attend conventions under instructions. The former interest is lost.

During the reigns of such political masters as Cameron, Conkling and others Republican conventions were seething whirlpools of uncertainty. Now the voters elect their delegates and instruct them before they leave home.

At the Chicago convention this year Penrose was imbued with the old-time idea that he could go and barter the delegates from Pennsylvania for the purpose of personal aggrandizement, but it only resulted in humiliating failure. He caused word to be sent out through the newspaper correspondents that he was being seriously considered for chairman of the National Committee, but the country only ridiculed the suggestion—the thought was too incongruous for serious consideration.

The appearance of ex-Senator J. Donald Cameron at the convention in Chicago was noted by the New York Tribune as emphasizing the contrast between the national conventions of the 70's and 80's and the convention of today. Then, it is said, the leaders met and fought out the issues among themselves. Now they go to national gatherings only to execute the decisions of the party.

There is a good deal of basis for this contrast. The Republican conventions of 1876, 1880, 1884, 1888 and even 1892 were battle grounds on which leaders were pitted against one another and the personal education was potent. In 1876, 1880, 1884 and 1888 two factions of nearly equal strength contended for party control. The advocates of autocratic management, of the perpetuation of machine rule and the maintenance of a standing army of political workers were pitted against the advocates of more popular representation, the divorce of politics from the spoils system and the suppression of the political mercenary. The latter element slowly drove the former to the wall, but not until after many tests of strength and many spectacular political encounters. In the old days the issue was often doubtful until the balloting was over, and campaign strategy was at a premium. In the newer era of popular power nominations are usually decided long before the convention meets. The old delegate convention system gave much freer play to the arts of manipulation.

Under it leaders like Conkling, Cameron and Logan were able to control New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois, casting the large part of each state's vote against the actual wishes of a majority of the voters. There can be no question that with a primary system in use such as Pennsylvania now has Mr. Blaine could have carried this state in 1876, 1880 and 1884 against any other aspirant for the Republican Presidential nomination. Popular rule in New York would also have broken Mr. Conkling's power before 1880. But under the old system a minority in control of the party machinery could overrule the majority, and groups of leaders in various states could roll up a formidable vote without much real support among their constituents.

The nomination of Major McKinley in 1896 showed what could be accomplished by a popular canvass. Major McKinley was nominated not because the Republican politicans wanted him, but because he had demonstrated this strength with the rank and file all over the country. Fortunately a new generation was then pushing to the front, untrained in the factional wars of Half Breeds and Stalwarts and wholly uninterested in them. The voters of the party had come to stand more and more on common ground and were more and more determined to assert themselves. They have asserted themselves since 1896, and the conventions of 1896, 1900, 1904 and 1908 only registered the will of the party. Naturally these gatherings were "dull" compared with the fight-to-the-finish conventions of the era of boss rule and factionalism. It is no discredit to the convention of 1908 that it was "dull." It was so only because the voters of the party have thought and acted for themselves and have thereby definitely shaped its course in advance. It may have lacked the spectacular element of uncertainty and suspense, but its action reflected with precision and accuracy the desires of the great majority of the Republicans of the Union.

Congress at its last session made appropriations exceeding one billion dollars. The deficit this year amounts to $75,000,000. The probable deficit next year is placed at $150,000,000, this being the estimate of Chairman Tawney, of the Committee on Appropriations. It was in 1894 that there was shown the only deficit since the Civil War. In six out of the last ten years there were surpluses, while deficits were shown in the other four years. The estimated deficit this year is $10,000,000 in excess of the combined deficits of 1904 and 1905 which together amounted to $64,775,000.

VETERANS PASSING AWAY.

Of interest to every member of the Grand Army of the Republic in this State are the Memorial Day reports from G. A. R posts in Pennsylvania, received by the Rev. Dr. John W. Sayers, of Chester, who is Department Chaplain. It is the work of the department chaplain to report to the National Encampment, and Dr. Sayers is getting his report ready for that event, which will take place this year in Ohio. Dr. Sayers has been department chaplain for thirty-seven years.

The reports submitted to Dr. Sayers shows that 50,000 graves of departed comrades were decorated on Memorial Day. In the 1730 cemeteries were involved. Four hundred and seventy-five memorial addresses were made. There are 52[?] posts in the State, but some of the addresses did not take place because the day was a rainy one. Last year there were 1100 deaths in the Grand Army of the Republic rank in this State. There are 22,772 members of the Grand Army in good standing in Pennsylvania.

Death is cutting a wide swath in the ranks of the old soldiers in the Keystone State.

THE PROPOSED ADMENDMENTS.

The proposed amendments to the Constitution of Pennsylvania passed by the Legislature at its last session will be considered by the next Legislature. They should be the subject of free and considerate discussion by the people in the canvass for the election of members.

There are several of these proposed amendments but those which are of the widest concern to all the people of the State are the ones providing for the abolition of the February election. If those admendments are adopted all elections thereafter, both for general and municipal officials, will take place in November. The intention is to so arrange the tenure of the several officials that the choice of State officers, with Congressmen and members of the Legislature, shall fall upon the even-numbered years, while those officials that are now chosen in February shall be elected in the odd-numbered years. This is with a view to still keep the general and municipal election separate.

The fact that recently two primary elections a year, together with a personal registration system, have been added to our yearly political responsibilities has created a feeling that there is too much of this sort of distraction from the ordinary pursuit of business. No sooner is the November election over than there must be preparation for the local primaries, followed closely by the February election, and that very soon by the spring primary. After that the time before the personal registration days is comparatively brief, so that something claiming the political attention of the citizen is going on pretty much all the time.

If the proposed admendments are adopted the February election and one primary with an extra registration day will be abolished, reducing the obligations by practically one-half. Nobody felt the need of this until the new primary system was adopted, which substantially doubled the number of elections each year. The protest against so many elections was not long in making itself heard. It was very general throughout the State, the item of expense entering into consideration in a large degree. It was in response to the sentiment thus expressed that the Legislature put through the proposed admendments

TURN ON THE SUNSHINE.

Sentiment rules the country, and a generous share of the depression now passing as mist before the sun was due to blue talk. The public usually goes to extremes, and the belief that the country was going to the dogs got beyond control almost over night. During the past three months there has been considerable thinking over what it was all about, and the result is a cheerful resolve to go out and buy some new clothes, new dresses and shirt waists, etc., and the very fact of having some new outfits to welcome the good old summer time makes everyone much more optimistic, and now that the tide has turned, the time cannot be long delayed when a normal demand will set thousands of idle looms into operation and give full week's employment with full pay to thousands of operatives who have been forced to curtail their expenses on account of the business depression, says the American Cotton and Wool Reporter.

The operatives of our textile mills are among the best spenders in the country. They dress fully equal to any class of our people, and to a certain extent, yes, to a large extent, they are in the class that spend a generous share of the wages they receive. Perhaps ten million people have been affected by the curtailment in the textile industry, and have been forced to restrict their expenditures on account of it. Now that the mills are filling up, larger numbers of this ten million are becoming better spenders for everything, necessities and luxuries as well. The operatives can spend more on themselves and those dependent upon them. The grocers and their families can spend more, and every trade patronized by mill operatives will feel the good effects of increased business within a remarkably brief time, if the pessimist is forced to cover and everyone talks cheerfully. If you cannot join a "sunshine" club, organize one, and buttonhole everyone you meet to become a member.

A "STAND-PATTER'S" VIEW.

This is the way the American Economist, the organ of the Protective Tariff League, sizes up the result of the Republican National Convention:

It was somewhat of a stand-pat affair, after all. Not only did the stand-patters prevent the nomination for Vice President of a notorious Western Tariff ripper and an Eastern shouter for "free raw materials," but they secured, instead, the nomination of a sound and reliable Protectionist. Moreover, while deprecating the declaration in favor of Tariff Revision, they can point with satisfaction to the fact that the platform adopted is in its essential details more radically and completely Protectionist than any that has ever before been adopted by a Republican national convention. This is true, not only as to the strong pronouncement for Protective duties that shall cover the difference in production cost at home and abroad, "altogether with a reasonable profit" (a most admirable stipulation, which reflects with credit upon the practical common sense of the platform builders), but also as to the provision that when a dual Tariff system shall have become necessary the minimum rates shall at all times afford adequate Protection to American labor and industry. Then, too, there is wisdom and consistent Protectionism in the hard and fast condition that Tariff concessions to foreign countries can be granted only "under limitations fixed by the law." With the single exception of the Tariff revision pledge, the platform is all that any stand-patter could ask for.

SUNDAY POLITICS AT PT. PLEASANT

Leaders and Candidates Flee to Sequestered Spot to Hold Meeting.

"There have been holy men who hid themselves deep in the woody wilderness, and gave their lives to thought and prayer," but it was not exactly that sort of a bunch that traveled in high-powered automobiles from Bristol, Norristown and Doylestown—"far from the maddening crowds ignoble strife" and sought the sacred solitude of picturesque Point Pleasant, on the Delaware last Sunday.

To begin with the party was composed of Joseph R. Grundy, of Bristol; Republican candidates for the Legislature, Clarence J. Buckman, of Middletown township, and Isaac Clymer, of Sellersville; candidate for Sheriff, Henry S. Beidler, County Chairman Oscar O. Bean and United States District Attorney John C. Swartley, of Doylestown; Postmaster Elwood Minster, of Bristol; John Birkey, County Committeeman, of Newportville; Wm. V. Leech, President of the School Board; Howard I. James and Franklin Gilkeson, borough attorneys and Dr. J. deB. Abbott, of Bristol; Congressman Irving P. Wanger and Adam Scheidt, the big brewer, of Norristown; John N. Bowen, editor of Mr. Grundy's Doylestown Republican; Charles Eastburn, of Yardley, and former County Treasurer John B. Poore, of Riegelsville and others. The party comprised about thirty who reached the unfrequented spot in a number of machines. Arrangements had been previously made for the crowd at the village hotel.

The political situation was discussed in all its phases with special reference as to the successful election of the Republican candidates for the Legislature which are considered to be in danger.

It was decided that Messrs. Buckman and Clymer shall make their campaign on a good roads platform and especially ignore the United States Senatorial proposition. In a speech Mr. Swartley stirred up a hornet's nest by boldly proclaiming that the administration of the Highway Department was something of a farce and that the road making in the State was a system of patches resulting in little permanent good.

These remarks by one of the prominent organization leaders fired Attorney James to lurid eloquence in defense of the stone road system. Mr. James was vigorously applauded when he finished.

Addresses were also made by Congressman Wanger and others. It is proposed to hold similar sociable meetings during the campaign. The Bristol contingent returned late in the afternoon travel-stained and weary.

Ladies' Aid Society.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the English Lutheran Church held its meeting at the home of Hugh Hill, Magnolia, Bristol township. A very enjoyable evening was spent in playing games, piano playing and singing, after which refreshments were served.

Those present were: Mrs. Hugh Hill, Mrs. Helsel, Misses Mae Hill, Minnie Schade, Mary Helsel, Ida Fisher, Jennie Scheetz, Irene Helsel, Ethel Hill, Maud Scheetz, Edith Helsel, Helen Hill, Cora Helzel, Messrs. Walter Hill, Rev. N. Ritter, John Bruden, Jacob Kessler, Ernest Hellings, Harry Mahan, Elmer Houser, Elwood Dyer, Maurice Barton and Alfred Vandegrift.

Ingersoll on Clover.

In declining an invitation to a Clover club dinner once Colonel Robert Ingersoll wrote:

"A wonderful thing is 'clover.' It means honey and cream—that is to say, industry and contentment—that is to say, the happy bees in perfumed fields and at the cottage gate 'Old Boss,' the bountiful, serenely chewing satisfaction's cud in that blessed twilight pause that, like a benediction, falls between all toil and sleep. This clover makes me dream of happy hours, of childhood's rosy cheeks, of dimpled babes, of wholesome, loving wives, of honest men, of springs and brooks and violets and all there is of stainless joy in peaceful human life.

"A wonderful word is clover! Drop the 'c,' and you have the happiest of mankind. Take away the 'c' and 'r,' and you have left the only thing that makes a heaven of this dull and barren earth. Cut off the 'r' alone, and there remains a very deceitful bud that sweetens the breath and keeps peace in countless homes whose masters frequent clubs. After all, Bottom was right, 'Good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow.'"

A Curious Plant.

"A curious plant," said an eminent botanist, "is the wild tamarind or juba plant of the riverside and waste places of tropical America, and very strange are its effects upon the nonruminant animals that feed upon its young shoots, leaves, pods and seeds. It causes horses to lose the hair from their manes and tails, has a similar effect upon mules and donkeys and reduces pigs to complete nakedness. Horses are said to recover when fed exclusively on corn and grass, but the new hair is of different color and texture from the old, so that the animal is never quite the same as it was. One animal of which I personally knew after feeding on the plant lost its hoofs and had to be kept in slings until they grew and hardened again. Ruminant animals are not thus affected, and the growth of the plant is actually encouraged in the Bahamas as a fodder plant for cattle, sheep and goats. The difference is probably due to changes effected upon it in the chewing of the cud."

A Trying Position.

An East Indian paper prints the following, written by a native subordinate in his diary while in a very trying position:

"Up a tree where I adhere with much pain and discomposure while big tiger roaring in a very awful manner on the fire line. This is very inconsiderate tiger and causes me great griefs, as I have before reported to your honor. This is two times he spoiled my work, coming and shouting like thunder and putting me up a tree and making me behave like an insect. It is a very awkward fate to me, and the tiger is most inconsiderate."

The Widow's Dower.

It is certain that "dower," the estate for life which the widow acquires at her husband's death, was not known among the early Saxons. In the laws of King Edmund the widow is directed to be supported wholly out of the personal estate. Dower is generally ascribed to the Normans, but it was first introduced into the feudal system by Emperor Frederick II, who was contemporary with the English Henry III, about 1250.

The Word "News."

On the derivation of the word "news," which has been a puzzle to many learned philologists, there is the following:

The word explains itself without a muse,
And the four letters speak from whence comes "news;"
From north, east, west and south—the solution's made.
Each quarter gives account of war and trade.

CHILD LABOR PROGRAMME

Outline of Plans by Secretary of Philadelphia Committee Before the State Educational Association.

Child labor, with especial reference to its educational side, was the subject considered last week at State College by the State Educational Association at its 52d session. Fred S. Hall Secretary, of the Philadelphia Child Labor Committee gave the principal address, which was discussed by F. N. Frits, Principal of the Walnut Street School, McKeesport; W. J. Wightman, Superintendent of Schools, Altoona; R. E. Laramy, Superintendent of Schools, Phoenixville and O. C. Lester, Superintendent of Schools, Rochester.

The importance of Mr. Hall's address was that it announced the position of his committee in regard to amending the child labor law. The first change to be recommended aims to stop false swearing by parents as to their children's ages, by requiring that official for religious proof of age be submitted. Another change that touches educators directly is to give school officials the right to issue employment certificates and to take that right away from notaries public, aldermen and magistrates. A third change wanted will make explicit the vague educational requirement which is now in the law, but which it is claimed is practically a dead letter. Mr. Hall urged the school officials to take advantage of a recent ruling of the Chief Factory Inspector, based on an opinion of the Attorney General, so as to get control of the child labor situation. In this connection Chief Factory Inspector Delaney was severely criticized for his failure adequately to notify those who issue employment affidavits, in regard to this important new ruling.

Referring to parental perjury in the matter of age certificates Mr. Hall said, "School men know better than almost any others, the valuelessness of a parent's oath, when the prize to be won is a working paper for the child. Seven school superintendents located in the anthracite region with 14,993 in school, estimated that 2,460 boys were working under the present law on false affidavits in their boroughs. Of similar import was the experience of Superintendent M. W. Cummings of Olyphant. Mr. Cummings found 78 children at work, chiefly in collieries and silk mills, all with affidavits, showing them to be 14 years of age. Their ages were as follows: 10 were 10 years old; 20 were 11 years old; 36 were 12 years old and 12 were 13 years old. These children at work on false affidavits amounted to seven per cent of all the ten year old children in the borough, fourteen percent of all the eleven year old children and twenty-six per cent of all the twelve year old children."

A comparison of conditions under the Pennsylvania law and the law of New York is in favor of the latter state. Mr. Hall said, "Although the Chief Factory Inspector minimizes the child labor evil in his last report, a comparison of the figures there given with the corresponding figures in New York State shows that in every case but one, where comparison is possible, the proportion of children in Pennsylvania is larger than in New York State, and that in that great child using industry, the manufacture of hosirey and knit goods, with its 4,509 children employed in Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania's percentage of child labor is seven times as great as New York's 22 per cent. as compared with 3 per cent., while in both silk and cigars Pennsylvania has 4 times as large a proportion of child laborers. These official Pennsylvania figures of children 14 to 16 years of age are so much and so uniformly larger than the New York State figures, because of the thousands of eleven, twelve and thirteen year old children who are officially recorded as fourteen, that being the age shown on their affidavits."

Referring to the importance of putting the issuance of employment certificates in some other hands than those of the notaries, magistrates, aldermen and justices of the peace Mr. Hall said, "I shall assume that no argument is needed to prove the inadequacy of the present system whereby approximately 10,000 unsupervized men and women throughout the state have entrusted to them the important function of deciding when a child has met the legal requirements for beginning work. Within the past nine weeks the system has failed most miserably when put to a pefectly normal test. It is fundamental that those who may issue employment affidavits should receive from the Chief Factory Inspector the special blank forms for this purpose, together with any other information necessary for the proper performance of their work in this particular matter. On May 8th last the Chief Factory Inspector, who is the most ardent champion of this discredited system, made an important ruling in regard to the procedure to be followed in issuing employment affidavits. When he was asked if all those who might issue such affidavits had been notified of this new ruling he replied that it would be a physical impossibility for him to notify all these persons, since he had no list of their names and no funds or clerical force sufficient for the task. Had the issuance of certificates been in the hands of the school authorities less than 150 letters from the Chief Factory Inspector would have given the information at all those affected by it to any important extent."

Bristol Objected to Decision.

A game of baseball Saturday, on the West Burlington grounds, between the South Bristol and the R. T. Wood teams ended in a dispute over the decision of the umpire. The Wood players started in the game by batting heavily, but by the end of the sixth inning the score stood 18 to 11 in favor of Bristol. In the beginning of the seventh, when the Jerseymen were on the field, and two men out, with a man on second, when a man at bat stepped over the home plate and the player at second attempted to reach third when he was called out. The visitors objected to the decision and the Wood team claimed the game by 9 to 0.

Giants Want Games.

The Waldron Giants of Bristol defeated the Pine Grove team on Sunday by the score of 11 to 9, winning every game of the series. It is claimed that the Giants sent Mulholland and Hamilton of Bloomsdale to the tall timber. The Giants would like to arrange games with any teams in this vicinity. Address T. A. Sharp, manager, or C. Spencer, assistant, Bristol.

Death of Bensalem Infants.

The eight-months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Larkin, of Cornwells, died on Tuesday of infantile atrophy.

On the same day the five-months old son of Mr. and Mrs. John McGann, of Andalusia, died suddenly. There was no physician in attendance and Deputy Coroner Rue gave a certificate with cholera infantum as cause of death.

Marie: "He proposed to me on a postcard." Gertie: "Did you accept him?" Marie "Of course not. Do you suppose I would marry a man who doesn't care two cents for me?"

Lord Lewson: "Why, Pat, there used to be two windmills there." Pat: "Thrue for you, sir." Lord Lewson: "Why is there but one now?" Pat: "Bedad, they took one down to lave more wind for t'other."

Waiter: "Mr. Brown's left his umbrella again, sir. I do believe he'd leave his head if it were loose." Robinson: "I dare say you're right. I heard him say yesterday he was going to Switzerland for his lungs."

"I hear that the young woman designer in Madame Paree's stylish dressmaking establishment is a very estimable person." "She ought to be. It's her business to lead a pattern life."

Failure is the only thing that any man can achieve without effort.

OH! FLORENCE

Bristol Base Ball Team Administered Defeat to Jersey Boys.

Florence lost their third game of the season last Sunday, the home team doing the trick to the tune of 5-3.

Both pitchers were touched up rather lively in the opening inning, Florence making four hits—two of them scratches—and scoring two runs; while the Bristolians made three hits—one a two-bagger—which, with a wild throw and a base on balls, netted four runs. Neither team scored again until the fifth, when singles by Morey, Wilson and H. Cheeseman tallied another run for the visitors. Bristol added a run also in their half. With two out, Krouse got a base on balls, reached third on Daniels' hit and scored on J. Cheeseman's error of J. Mulligan's grounder, after Daniels had purloined second base. Neither team scored after this, although Bristol had runners on second and third in the eighth.

Hewitt's fielding and Krouse's batting were features.

NOTES.

Each team had a double play to its credit.

Florence had all kinds of luck in the first inning.

In hitting and fielding J. Mulligan still keeps at it.

Game starts at 3 o'clock. Get the habit—come early.

Owing to the intense heat the attendance was very poor.

Roe's fumble of J. Mulligan's hit allowed Daniels to tally.

Gallagher made a bad muff of Vanamburg's fly in the sixth inning.

Krouse hit at a thousand percentage—three hits and a base on balls.

Barton just missed getting Morey's fly in the first inning, which fell safe.

Florence didn't find the Bristol team such a "cinch" as the one they defeated earlier in the season.

Bristol will play Burlington Sunday. Don't forget the collection as a big sum is paid for this team.

Wilson's bunt in the first inning took a bad bound away from Hoppe and went safe in the opening inning.

By fast fielding McDermott threw out Roe in the second inning, after his grounder had caromed off Hoppe's shins.

Wilson beat out an infield hit in the fifth inning—Daniels fielded the ball with his bare hand, but his throw was not soon enough to catch the runner.

Hewitt is playing a wonderful game in the field; he accepted nine chances. On Saturday with Camden he accepted eleven, six put outs and five assists.

Vanamburg's services seem to be in great demand among the Jersey teams; this Sunday will make his third game he has appeared here this season. He is a Riverside boy and a good one.

Tullytown Won from Trenton.

Tullytown added another to its string of wins Sunday afternon by taking the Trenton Professionals into camp by the score 6 to 2. Up to the eighth inning it was a fine battle.

The first base play of Davis and the hitting of Myers were the best things about the play of the Trenton nine, while Appleton, Bunting and Thorn did clever work for Tullytown. The score follows:

Newtown Defeated Langhorne.

Newtown improved its standing in the Bucks County League at the expense of Langhorne on Saturday afternoon when they defeated the latter team at Langhorne. It looked hopeless for Newtown until the eighth inning when they landed on Praul for several hits, which coupled with several errors, enabled them to score enough runs to win the game.

MUTATION.

They talk of short lived pleasure. Be it so
Pain dies as quickly. Stern, hard featured pain
Expires and lets her weary prisoners go.
The fiercest agonies have shortest reign,
And after dreams of horror comes again
The welcome morning with its rays of peace
Oblivion, softly wiping out the stain,
Makes the strong secret pangs of shame to cease.
Remorse is virtue's root. Its fair increase
Are fruits of innocence and blessedness
Thus joy, o'erborne and bound, doth still release
His young limbs from the chains that round him press
Weep not that the world changes. Did it keep
A stable, changeless state 'twere cause indeed to weep

Rumor.

Rumor is a common houn, singular and feminine gender—except when it is used by stock gamblers to influence the market or by statesmen to influence politics.

Necessity is the grandmother of Rumor, because Rumor is the child of Invention. Considered separately, its forebears are feminine idlebodies and masculine busybodies.

The physical properties of Rumor are unique and interesting. It is more potent than fact, attains to a greater velocity than electricity, cannot be reduced to a syllogism, feeds on emotion, sleeps with one eye open, gathers strength with age and dies of punctured dropsy.

Rumor is like Santa Claus. We know its general tendencies, but not its specific origin. All we know of Rumor is from hearsay. No one has ever been arrested for stealing it, as the original owner is always unwilling to claim it.

Rumor is predatory. Its chief quarries are lovers (married or single), preachers, social leaders, policemen, politicians and people. Its bitterest foe is Rumor. Therefore Rumor should always be treated homeopathically. Its motto is: "Don't believe half you hear and forget the other half."—Lippincott's.

Drumming the Drummer.

In the Silver Bow club in Helena they used to play big poker. At the game one day sat Marcus Daly, George Hearst and J. B. Haggin, when there burst in a radiant New York drummer who had a two weeks' card to the institution. He marched up to the players and politely inquired if he might take a hand.

"Why, yes. Come right in," said Daly.

The drummer pulled out a roll of bills and threw a $100 note on the table. "Let me have chips for that," he said grandly. He went to hang up his coat and hat. When he returned the bill still lay on the table.

"What's the matter, gentlemen? Ain't my money good?"

"Why, yes, to be sure," said Daly. "Hearst, give the gentleman one white chip."

Rough on the Dictionary.

Billy, aged twelve, took part in a debate on imperialism. His opponent made a point by quoting the definition of empire from the dictionary. Billy, nothing daunted, with all the air of Patrick Henry, rose up and said:

"It's all right for my opponent to quote from the dictionary, but as for me I rely on the facts!"—Everybody's.

A Wife's Ready Wit.

A popular clergyman saw a lady about to call whom he was anxious not to meet. So he said to his wife, "I'll run upstairs, my dear, and escape till she goes away."

After about an hour he quietly tiptoed to the stair landing and listened. All was quiet below. Reassured, he began to descend and called out over the balustrade:

"Well, my dear, you got rid of that old bore at last."

The next instant a voice from below rooted him to the spot. It was the voice of the caller! Then came a response which sounded inexpressibly sweet to him. It was the voice of his wife:

"Yes, dear, she went away over an hour ago. But here is our good friend, Mrs. Blank, whom I am sure you want to meet."

The Young Minister's Impression.

A young minister was particularly anxious to make a favorable impression on his hearers at his first Sabbath morning service.

In the quietness of his study he suddenly hit upon a plan whereby this end would admirably be accomplished. His text for the following Sunday was, "And the Holy Ghost descended in the form of a dove."

To carry out the minister's great idea the Irish sexton was necessary, and Pat was sent for.

"Now, Patrick," said the minister, "on next Sunday morning I am going to preach a sermon on the text, 'And the Holy Ghost descended in the form of a dove.' I want you to climb up into the belfry and station yourself at the small trapdoor over the center of the church and open it just enough so you can distinctly hear every word I say and still not make yourself seen by any one in the congregation. About the middle of my sermon I shall repeat the text, 'And the Holy Ghost descended in the form of a dove,' and you are to lower a live snow white dove, which I shall give you, down through the opening, and it will flutter through the air and be the means of making a deep impression on my hearers, who will readily see its connection with the text."

On Sunday morning Patrick departed with the dove, even himself deeply impressed with the great originality the young minister had displayed, and promising that he would faithfully carry out to the letter every wish.

The congregation was much larger than usual, and all were anxious to hear the young minister, who had come to them "highly recommended." They were all attention, and not a sound was heard except that which proceeded from the mouth of the eloquent speaker.

The middle of the sermon was reached, and the text was slowly and distinctly repeated, "And the Holy Ghost descended in the form of a dove." The reverend gentleman lifted his eyes slightly, expecting to see the beautiful symbol of purity and peace hovering over the heads of his hearers.

But no dove. Pat had evidently forgotten the cue or had failed to hear the minister at the important moment. So the text was repeated, this time a little louder, "And the Holy Ghost descended in the form of a dove." He arched his eyebrows a little higher, but no dove greeted his vision. He began to grow impatient, and the third time he repeated at the top of his voice, "And the Holy Ghost descended in the form of a dove." This time his eyes looked straight up as if in prayerful attitude, and he was rewarded, not by the graceful sway of the dove through the air, as had expected, but by the grimy, frightened face of Pat, who, in the agony of his failure to carry out his part of the plot, blurted out:

"Say, yer riverence, yer riverence, the cat ate up the Holy Ghost. Shall Oi sind down the cat?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

"Let me learn from your eyes what my fate will be," sang the poet; "let them teach me the secrets." "Thank you," interrupted the lady; "they have pupils enough now."

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Mrs. Harry B. Carter, Mansion street, is on the sick list.

The moving pictures at the People's Parlor on Mill street have been discontinued.

Edgar, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson, of Swain street, has typhoid fever.

William E. Doron took his employees of the ferryboat on an automobile trip to Willow Grove on Wednesday evening.

A mad dog caused considerable excitement on Linden street on Wednesday evening by running about, but was shot before it did any harm.

The First Baptist Church Sunday School picnic will be held at "Cold Spring," Edgely, tomorrow. Meet at the church in the morning at ten o'clock.

One of the summer cars of the trolley company went off the track at Edgely on Sunday morning and delayed traffic for an hour or two. Spreading rails caused the accident.

William, the young son of Patrick Callahan, of Buckley street, met with a bad accident on Sunday last, when he fell on a piece of tin, cutting his chin so severely that several stitches were required.

Whenever you feel you must go off to the mountains or the seaside, go into your back yard, lie flat upon your back in the grass, look up through the leaves at the blue sky—you will find that an excellent substitute.

The Methodist Sunday School picnic will be held at Burlington Island Park tomorrow, July 18. Children under 12 years will be given free transportation on the ferryboat, upon application to teachers for tickets.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Staley, of East Bristol township, died of marasmus on Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Staley have just recently moved into their new home erected on the river bank at Bloomsdale.

In default of $100 bail Guisippe Trombino was sent to the county jail to await trial for committing assault and battery upon Louisa Stallone last Friday. Both boarded at the home of Dominic Field. Hearing was held before 'Squire Kraft.

The Anchor Yacht Club will give its annual beach party on Saturday afternoon and evening, August 8th, on the club lawn at Pine Grove. There will be different kinds of races, a professional tennis match and a balloon ascension.

A meeting for all those interested in Sunday school work will be held this evening in the First Baptist Church. Everybody invited. An address will be made by W. D. Reel, of Philadelphia, a field worker of the State Sunday School Association.

Mrs. Isabella W. Callanan, wife of John M. Callanan, formerly of Bristol, died at her home in Hempstead, N. Y., on Sunday in her 75th year. The funeral services were held on Wednesday and interment made at Hempstead. Mr. Callanan is a brother of George Callanan of Bristol.

Constable John Heslop, of the Fifth ward, arrested Marcillino Pierino on Monday for violating the ordinance prohibiting the riding of bicycles on the sidewalks. A hearing was held before 'Squire Kraft and the defendant fined five dollars.

The moonlight lawn social which was to be held at the farm of Joseph Foy by the Light of Liberty Court, No. 14, of Bristol, on Thursday evening, July 23, will be held on the lawn of the Second Baptist Church, Race street. Refreshments will be served.

The Anchor Yacht Club house at Pine Grove now presents an attractive appearance. The place has recently been fitted up with electric lights, the wires having been strung from the hollow bridge to the club house. New flags have also been received and other improvements made.

While playing in the street the five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Lorimer was hit by a trolley car in Philadelphia a few days ago. The fender of the car picked the boy up and he escaped serious injury. Mr. and Mrs. Lorimer formerly resided in Bristol.

If you have items of local interest mail them to us for publication; we are always pleased to receive anything that is for the good of the community and you need not be backward concerning this matter. We desire to give all the news and in order to do this we need the co-operation of all interested in the local paper and news of the surrounding country.

List of letters remaining in the Bristol postoffice for the week ending July 14: Napoli Angel, Guiseppe Sallustio, May Allen, Teresa Anderson, C. D. Adams, M. L. Atkinson, Emma Brouse, James Brooks, Mary Corvash, John Steele, Anna Cleavy, Mrs. Mary J. Dulanty, Florence Harrison, Isaac Hinkey, Maud Lucas, Edwin Rue, John McNicholas, Corrado Romrio.

A distracted and discouraged nation may pause on the eve of a wind-jamming political contest to take heart of hope. The peach crop that was last spring destroyed at least 50 times is said to be the largest, the richest and the juciest in many years. From Georgia, Delaware and New Jersey, come rousing reports of a peach crop that fairly groans with its weight upon the supple and swaying branches.

Conditions with the farmers are now so far advanced that bumper crops of wheat and corn seem assured, while the outlook for other grains is fine. Furthermore, the agricultural bureau gladdens the hearts of the consumer as with the tidings that fruit, beginning with peaches and running all the way down the scale to winter apples, is also highly promising and reasonably certain to be unusually abundant.

If a man should come tramping into your parlor, besmearing the rugs or carpets with the mud, slime and filth that had adhered to his boots as he worked in the sewers or walked in the wet gutters, there would be an exceedingly lively protest and a very thorough cleaning after he had been ordered out or kicked out. A resort to violent measures to get rid of such an affront and menace would be upheld by the courts and by public sentiment. And yet such a nuisance, only more impudent and dangerous, is tolerated in every house, with but little effort to expel him or with but indifferent protests as to his presence. The common housefly is an unmitigated thief and scoundrel, a filth-bearing, disease-carrying rascal who does not stop at defiling rugs and carpets and furniture, but who deliberately and with intent sets his dirty feet anywhere, even upon the victuals you eat.

Now skeptics are attempting to undermine our belief in the pretty story of how Betsy Ross naively suggested to Washington that the flag of the new nation have five-pointed stars instead of six. It is said she knew how to fold the cloth so she could cut such a star at one snip of her scissors. Let us retain a few of our old traditions whether they are true or not. If Betsy did not make the suggestion, it does no harm to have the tradition that she did. A few treasured stories of the kind are worth while. Skeptics have shaken our faith in the hatchet and cherry-tree story concerning Washington; we have learned that the first president could show anger and do a few other things that fall short of perfection. They have actually been mean enough to try to prove to be mere fiction the story of that disciple of democracy, Thomas Jefferson, which led us to believe that he rode to his inauguration in simple style on horseback, hitched his nag and took the oath of office. Now, let's not disturb these fine old traditions. The interests of truth do not hang upon their certainty or uncertainty. They are pretty. Let us retain a few of them, among them the one that Betsy Ross did put her individuality into the first American flag.

WANT TO STOP FLYING TRAINS

Borough Council to Try to Limit Speed of Trains to Ten Miles an Hour Through the Borough. Must Not Block Crossings, Either.

"Today the Coroner's jury censured this Council for allowing the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to operate its trains as it pleased through this borough regardless of the lives of our people. And I for one stand here and demand that the company shall slow down the speed of its trains or move its tracks. In my opinion one man's life is worth more to us than the whole Pennsylvania Railroad Company!" With fierce emphasis thus spoke Gustav Rathke, the Second ward council member, at the regular meeting of the Bristol Borough Council on Monday evening.

"Another thing, too," said Mr. Rathke, "the railroad company has no right to block the main thoroughfare of this town with freight cars.

"A week ago last Saturday the fire companies of this town, in response to an alarm in the Third ward, were held up for twenty minutes at the Mill street crossing by a freight train which was standing there on the tracks. That end of town would have burned down in that length of time and it would have been the railroad company's fault."

The censure of the railroad company came at the wind-up of the proceedings on Monday night. The council chamber was like an inferno and the members had divested themselves of their coats and were vigorously manipulating fans in the endeavor to gain relief from the terrific heat.

As a result of the coroner's inquest into the death of Philip Winter, who was killed at the Mill street crossing, the jury censured Council for permitting the railroad company to maintain a hazardous crossing, which fact caused Mr Rathke to address Council as above quoted.

Mr. Rathke said it was time to do something and upon motion the clerk was instructed to bring to the next regular meeting of Council an ordinance bearing upon the borough's relations with Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Mr. Heeding also spoke vigorously on the subject. Mr. Wright said he thought nothing could be done in the matter; that the railroad company would do as it pleased.

Mr. Dougherty called attention to the fact that in all the distance from Broad street station to Jersey City, Bucks county is the only stretch where grade crossings still remain, and that Bristol is the only borough of any size which still permits crossings on the grade. There are no grade crossings except from Andalusia to Tullytown.

Mr. Spring said that in other towns the rate of speed is limited where there are grade crossings.

The meeting was called to order by President Owen. The absent members were: Messrs. Anderson, Grundy and Kilcoyne.

STREET COMMITTEE REPORT.

The street committee reported that the work of fixing Bath street had been delayed by the trolley company not having yet paved its portion of the street between the car rails and two feet outside owing to the non-arrival of the Belgian blocks. The committee was ready to proceed as soon as the trolley company did its part. A number of the drains which bursted during the storm on the 4th inst., had been repaired.

Work was progressing on the opening of Lincoln avenue and that new thoroughfare to Radcliffe street would be ready for traffic in a few days, thus giving a new outlet for the Fifth ward.

A number of the streets which are prepared to receive the treatment were being coated with "Tarvia," the expense being borne by private interests.

POLICE REPORT.

The Police committee reported that the officers made eight arrests during the month of June, 1 for horse stealing, 2 for automobile law violations, 1 for assault and battery, 1 for malicious mischief and 1 for drunkenness; 22 tramps were lodged in the station house. The committee also reported that Julian McLaughlin had been sworn in as an officer and is on duty.

MILK ORDINANCE PASSED.

The ordinance regulating the sale of milk in the borough and providing for the appointment of an inspector was read and placed upon final passage. There were no votes recorded against its passage.

RAILROAD AND COUNCIL CENSURED

Coroner's Jury Condemns Mill Street Railroad Crossing. Requests Borough Council to Take Action.

The Coroner's jury composed of B. C. Foster, Samuel S. Scott, Jacob M. Winder, Frank T. Chambers, William M. Downing and Albert Vanhorn, listened to the evidence at the inquest held on Monday and rendered the following verdict relative to the death of Philip G. Winter, of Bristol:

"That Philip G. Winter came to his death on the night of July 7th, 1908, between 10.30 and 11 o'clock, by being struck by engine of extra express train, No. 1416, at Mill street crossing, Bristol borough. We, the jury, censure the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for having the space left open on westbound track between the end of gate and ennett's fence. We also condemn the crossing as a dangerous one in every respect. We also censure the Borough Council for permitting the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for maintaining such a dangerous crossing. We also call the attention of the Borough Council to the speed at which trains are run through the borough, and request the Council to take action."

Howe's Great London Shows.

To select the kind of horses which have given Howe's Great Show a national reputation for having the finest horses of any show on earth, much time, intelligence, patience and perseverance was required. For the baggage and heavy work the Percheron type of draft horse was selected, and for the hippodrome races was chosen thirty cleancut Kentucky thoroughbred runners. Each year new stock is selected, always from the same breeds, and those that have been scarred, blemished or injured are culled out.

The mating up of the different teams is an object lesson to the eye, uniformity of size, color and style always predominating. When to the beautiful black, dapple gray and bay horses is added the cute Shetland ponies, it is not strange that the lengthy street parade of the Howe's Great London Shows is a most imposing and pleasing sight.

When Howe's London Shows exhibits here citizens will not only find the circus and menagerie exceedingly worthy of their patronage, but they will find that Howe's Horse Stables compose a veritable horse fair and they should always be visited. The visitor should not ask what becomes of these horses if they become crippled, as they will be displeased with the answer, which is that they are fed to the animals.

The big show comes to Bristol, Friday, July 24.

DEATH OF FORMER BRISTOLIAN

Edwin Wilkinson Died at His Home in Virginia on Sunday.

[Special to the Gazette.]

West Point, Va., July 12th.

Edwin Wilkinson, one of the oldest and most prominent business men and citizens of West Point, died in his beautiful home here today at noon, surrounded by those nearest and dearest to him. He leaves a widow, five sons and three daugters, all men and women all are married, but one. Death visited the family circle for the first time today. The children are Mrs. Charles Barham, of Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. C. W. Westbury, of Richmond Va; Mrs. Fred Roberts of Norfolk Va.; Edwin and Albert of Norfolk; Walter, of Philadelphia; Joseph, of West Point and Foster, of Roanoke.

Mr. Wilkinson first came to West Point, Va., in 1873 and has from the first been more closely connected with the business interests and history of West Point from every point of view, than any man now living here. For many terms he was Mayor of West Point, resigning to accept other positions of trust. Many will miss him sorely and remember his great kindness of heart, his justice to all and his charity to those needing a friend.

No man has ever done more for West Point and her people than Mr. Wilkinson. A fine business man, with rare common sense, his advice was sought by men far and near. He was a member of the Episcopal Church, also a member of the vestry. He first saw the light on February 20, 1842, in Scotland. About six years later his parents, Joseph Wilkinson and Alice Bywater, came to this country and settled at Bristol, Pa. He married Miss Jane Dyson of Huddersfield, Engand, in Philadelphia, July 4th, 1864. His remains will be taken to Bristol, Pa., for interment, leaving here on the York River boat at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

The deceased is a brother of John Wilkinson, of Bristol. Death was caused by uremia. Mr. Wilkinson was a veteran of the Civil War, having been a member of Company H, 26th Pa. Volunteers. He was twice wonded at the battle of Gettysburg. He left Bristol in 1873 for Virginia. Previous to that time he was superintendent of the Buckley street hosiery mill.

Accompanied by the sons, and C. W. Westbury, son-in-law, who is district passenger agent of the Southern Railway Company, the remains were brought to Bristol and interred at the Bristol Cemetery on Wednesday.

BOY STOLE JEWELS

Mr. and Mrs. Bromley Wharton, of Bristol township, paid the penalty of their kindness in taking a boy from the House of Refuge at Glen Mills and trying to make something of him.

The boy, William Blee, aged 19 years, who was recommended by the superintendent of the institution, rewarded his benefactors by stealing jewelry and cash amounting to about $800.

Blee had been in the employ of the Whartons at "Sunbury" farm for about a month, and for the last two or three weeks Mrs. Wharton had been missing rings, stickpins, jewels and money. Finally suspicion rested upon the boy and a warrant was issued and placed in the hands of Chief Saxton and Officer Bloodgood, of Bristol. The boy was arrested and upon being locked up in the station house confessed to the officers and made a clean breast of his larcenies. He told the officers of what disposition he made of the articles.

One package of jewels was recovered last Friday secreted at the farm, and on Saturday the boy in company with Officers Bloodgood and McLaughlin, went to Philadelphia, where they were joined by a detective of the City Hall bureau, and spent the day going about the city recovering articles of jewelry that had been sold for trifling sums. Some of the articles had been given to girls, others had been sold for twenty-five and fifty cents in Kensington, in South and West Philadelphia. The officers and prisoner returned from their long search in Philadelphia at 11 o'clock at night. Nearly all the plunder was recovered.

A hearing was held before 'Squire Kraft on Sunday and in default of $500 bail the prisoner was taken to the County Jail to await the next term of criminal court.

Where Mother Is.

Old-fashioned flowers, with fragance sweet,
Bloom, where mother is.
Life's psalm, a song replete
With joy, where mother is.
There all woes and sorrows cease,
Naught but rest and heavenly peace
Dwells, where mother is.

The jostling crowd, the wearing din,
Are not, where mother is
The flaunting rags of shame and sin
Reach not, where mother is.
Heart-sick, brain-tired, nerve-wracked soul,
Before thy tear-dimmed eyes a goal
Exists, where mother is.

All grief and doubt and unbelief
Flee, where mother is.
Hope and faith and sweet relief
Come, where mother is.
Mother, mother, name most sweet,
Heaven guide my weary feet
Home, where mother is.

New Law for Motor Boats.

The United States Local Inspectors of Steam Vessels and the Customs Inspectors will begin work at once in looking after the violators of the law in connection with motor boats as well as those who permit the overcrowding of all kinds of steam craft. Collector of Customs Hill has detailed a force of inspectors to watch all steamboat landings in Philadelphia and Camden, and special inspectors have been detailed for duty at Bridgeton, Wilmington, Chincoteague, Va., Burlington, Tuckerton and Somers Point, all those ports being under the control of United States Inspectors Sargent and Howard.

Motor boats are required under the law to comply with certain regulations, such as having a bell, a whistle, a fog horn, an anchor light, running lights, life preservers and two copies of the pilots regulations on each vessel. The inspectors have visited all the above ports and have conferred with the collectors of custom relative to prompt action against all violators of the navigation laws. Fast launches have been chartered at certain points to overhaul all crafts for an examination when evidence shows that an attempt is being made to avoid an examination.

Commercial Law Instruction.

The valuable and instructive series of articles on Commercial Law, published for some months in the Philadelphia Sunday Record, and which recently terminated, will be published in book form by the author. THE TALE OF THE TAINTED TENNER

By O. HENRY.

[Copyright, 1906, by the S. S. McClure Co.]

MONEY talks. But you may think that the conversation of a little old ten dollar bill in New York would be nothing more than a whisper. Oh, very well! Pass up this sotto voce autobiography of an X if you like. If you are one of the kind that prefers to listen to John D.'s checkbook roar at you through a megaphone as it passes by, all right. But don't forget that small change can say a word to the point now and then. The next time you tip your grocer's clerk a silver quarter to give you extra weight of his boss' goods read the four words above the lady's head. How are they for repartee?

I am a ten dollar treasury note, series of 1901. You may have seen me in a friend's hand. On my face, in the center, is a picture of the Rocky Mountains, inscribed a buffalo by fifty or sixty millions of Americans. The heads of Captain Lewis and Captain Clark adorn the ends. On my back is the graceful figure of Liberty or Ceres or Maxine Elliott standing in the center of the stage on a conservatory plant. My references is—or are—section 3588 revised statutes. Ten cold, hard dollars—I don't say whether silver, gold lead or iron—Uncle Sam will hand you over his counter if you want to cash me in.

I beg you will excuse any conversational breaks that I make. Thanks! I knew you would. Got that sneaking little respect and agreeable feeling toward even an X, haven't you? You see, a tainted bill doesn't have much chance to acquire a correct form of expression. I never knew a really cultured and educated person, that could afford to hold a ten spot any longer than it would take to do an Arthur Duffy to the nearest bill's all sign of delicatessen store.

For a six-year old I've had a high old and gorgeous circulation, I guess. I've paid as many debts as the man who dies. I've been owned by a good many kinds of people, but a little old ragged damp, dingy five dollar silver certificate gave me a jar one day. I was next to it in the fat and bad smelling purse of a butcher.

"Hey, you Sitting Bull," says it, "don't scrooge so. Anyhow, don't you think it's about time you went in on a customs payment and got reissued? For a series of 1880 you're a sight."

"Oh, don't get crackly just because you're a buffalo bill!" says the fiver. "You'd be limp, too, if you'd been stuffed down in a thick cotton and lisle thread under an elastic all day and the thermometer not a degree under 85 in the store."

"I never heard of a pocketbook like that," says I. "Who carried you?"

"A shoppgirl," says the five spot.

"What's that?" I had to ask.

"You'll never know till their million alum romes," says the fiver.

Just then a two dollar bill behind me with a George Washington head spoke up to the fiver:

"Aw, cut out yer kicks. Ain't lisle thread good enough for yer? If you was under all cotton like I've been to day and choked up with factory dust till the lady with the cornucopia on me sneezed half a dozen times you'd have some reason to complain."

That was the next day after I arrived in New York. I came in a $500 package of tens to a Brooklyn bank from one of its Pennsylvania correspondents, and I haven't made the acquaintance of any of the five and two spot's friends' pocketbooks yet. Silk for mine every time.

I was lucky money. I kept on the move. Sometimes I changed hands twenty times a day. I saw the inside of every business. I fought for my owner's every pleasure. It seemed that on Saturday nights I never missed being slipped down on a bar. Tens were always slipped down, while ones and twos were slid over to the bartender folded. I got in the habit of looking for nines, and I managed to soak in a little straight or some spilled Martini or Manhattan whenever I could. Once I got tied up in a great greasy roll of bills in a pushcart peddler's jeans. I thought I never would get in circulation again, for the future department store owner lived on 8 cents' worth of dog meat and onions a day. But this peddler got into trouble one day on account of having his cart too near a crossing, and I was rescued. I always will feel grateful to the cop that got me. He changed me at a cigar store near the Bowery that was running a crap game in the back room. So it was the captain of the precinct, after all, that did me the best turn when he got his. He blew me for wine the next evening in a Broadway restaurant, and I really felt as glad to get back again as an Astor does when he sees the lights of Charing Cross.

A tainted fen certainly does get action on Broadway. I was always once and got folded in a little dogskin purse among a lot of dimes. They were bragging about the busy times there were in Ossining whenever three girls got hold of one of them during the ice cream season. But it's slow moving vehicles keep to the right for the little bob tips when you think of the way we bison plasters refuse to stick to anything during the rush hour hour.

The first I ever heard of tainted money was one night when a good thing with a Van to his name threw me over with some other bills to buy a stack of blues.

About midnight a big easy going man with a fat face like a monk's and the eye of a janitor with his wages raised took me and a lot of other notes and rolled us into what is termed a "wad" among the money tainters.

"Ticket me for five hundred," said he to the banker, "and look out for everything, Charlie. I'm going out for a stroll in the glen before the moonlight fades from the brow of the cliff. If anybody finds the roof in their way there's $60,000 wrapped in a comic supplement in the upper left hand corner of the sack. Be bold. Everywhere be bold, but be not bowled over. Night."

I found myself between two twenty dollar gold certificates. One of 'em says to me:

"Well, old shorthorn, you're in luck tonight. You'll see something of life. Old Jack's going to make the Tenderloin look like a Hamburg steak."

"Explain," says I. "I'm used to joints, but I don't care for filet mignon with the Lind of sauce you serve."

"Excuse me," said the twenty. "Old Jack is the proprietor of this gambling house. He's going on a whiz tonight because he offered $50,000 to a church and it refused to accept it because they said his money was tainted."

"What is a church?" I asked.

"Oh, I forgot," says the twenty, "that I was talking to a tenner. Of course you don't know. You're too much to put into the contribution basket and not enough to buy anything at a bazaar. A church is—a large building in which pewpipers and tidies are sold at $20 each."

I don't care much about chinning with gold certificates. There's a streak of yellow in 'em. All is not gold that's quitters.

Old Jack certainly was a gilt edged sport. When it came his time to loosen up he never referred the waiter to an actuary.

By and by it got around that he was smiting the rock in the wilderness, and all along Broadway things with cold noses and hot gullets fell in on our trail. The third jungle book was there waiting for somebody to put covers on it. Old Jack's money may have had a taint to it but all the same, he had orders for his Camembert piling up on him every minute. First his friends rallied round him, and then the fellows that he's friends knew by sight, and then a few of his enemies hurled the hatchet and finally he was buying beefsteaks for so many Neapolitan fisher maidens and butterfly octets that the head waiters were phoning all over town for Julian Mitchell to please come around and get them into some kind of order.

At last we floated into an uptown cafe that I knew by heart. When the Hodcarriers' union in jackets and aprons saw us coming the chief goat kicker called out, "Six, eleven, forty-two, nineteen, twelve," to his men, and they put on nose guards till it was clear whether we meant Port Arthur or Portsmouth. But Old Jack wasn't working for the furniture and glass factories that night. He sat down quiet and sang "Ramble" in a half hearted way. His feelings had been hurt, so the twenty told me, because his offer to the church had been refused.

But the wassail went on, and Brady himself couldn't have hammered the thirst mob into a better imitation of the goat penchant for the stuff that you screw out of a bottle with a napkin.

Old Jack paid the twenty above me for a round, leaving me on the outside of his roll. He laid the roll on the table and sent for the proprietor.

"Mike," says he, "here's money that the good people have refused. Will it buy of you wines in the name of the devil? They say it's tainted."

"It will," says Mike, "and I'll put it in the drawer next to the bills that keeps me. I wish I was big enough to move in society with you tainted bills."

"Six, eleven, forty-two, nineteen, twelve."

"Shut up," says I. "There's no such thing. I know the rest of it. There's a tenderloin to the Lord somewhere in it. Now look on my back and read what you see there."

"This note is a legal tender at its face value for all debts, public and private."

"This talk about tainted money makes me tired," says I.

The Perfumed Cloud.

The dentist's sleeve was smeared with a pale dust. He beat it with his palm, and a perfumed cloud arose.

"Makeup," he said, laughing. "The day's usual harvest of makeup. Why the deuce, to front the fierce white light of a dental chair, will women come to me with makeup plastered thick on their pretty faces? They all, or nearly all, do it. Their lips are reddened, their brows pencilled, their cheeks rouged, and in a few cases the tiny network of veins in the temples is outlined in blue. Pegging away at their teeth, I mop up all that makeup on my coat sleeve. I smear red over white noses, black over pink cheeks. Phew! Look out!"

And, brushing his cuff again, he leaned back to escape the sweet smelling cloud that filled the air.—Exchange.

Difficult Feats.

"Here are some extracts from a few modern popular novels," said an author as he took down a scrap book. Then he read:

"The worthy pastor appeared at the manse door, his hands thrust deep in the pockets of his loose jacket, while he turned the leaves of his prayer book thoughtfully and wiped his glasses with a distrought air."

"After the door was closed a stealthy foot slipped into the room and with cautious hand extinguished the light."

"Fitzgibbon lingered over his final lemonade, when a gentle voice tapped him on the shoulder, and, turning, he beheld his old friend once again."

"The chariot of revolution is rolling onward, gnashing its teeth as it rolls."—Washington Star.

Greedy Little Salmon.

Little creatures may be very greedy and yet not be able to eat much because of their size, as was illustrated for instance, in the case of a batch of about 20,000 little Chinook salmon that were hatched out at the aquarium. These young fishes, each about two inches long, would eat so much that their little stomachs fairly stuck out and yet to feed the whole 20,000 took daily only one pound of liver and a quart of herring roe, both chopped fine.—New York Sun.

An Exception.

"I think," said the merchant, "I'll have to fire your friend Polk. I never saw any one quite so lazy."

"Slow in everything, is he?"

"No, not everything. He gets tired quick enough."—Exchange.

Easy Enough.

"I cannot live but a week longer wizout you!"

"Really, duke! Now, how can you fix on a specific length of time?"

"Ze landlord fix on it, miss, not I."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Jenny Lind's Piety.

Jenny Lind, who gave her first $2,000 to the poor, continued throughout her life a series of charities and pieties. In regard to the latter we have the assurance of a friend—that this greatest of singers deliberately cut short her own public career while her voice was still in perfection. It was Lady Taylor, wife of the author of "Philip Van Artevelde," who found Jenny Lind sitting toward evening on a south coast beach just after her withdrawal, with a book in her lap. She spoke of her resolve. "I found that this"—the setting sun—"was becoming less to me and that this"—the book in her lap was a Bible—"was becoming nothing to me, and I knew then that I must check myself and change my life."—London Standard.

Mexican Lottery Tickets.

Nearly $100,000 is spent in the City of Mexico every week in lottery tickets, and in the same period about $70,000 is paid back in premiums. On the weeks immediately preceding the big drawings the sale, of course, mounts up to great sums—as, for instance when the $200,000 drawings are held there are 20,000 tickets at $40 each sold on the streets, and practically every ticket is disposed of, most of them during the last two weeks before the drawing. But as a general proposition, on an average, $15,000 a day is spent by the people of the City of Mexico on the lotteries.—Mexican Herald.

The Open Window.

Children brought up with open windows appear indeed to be about fifteen times more likely to contract adenoids than those who sleep with the windows shut on cold and damp nights, or at least than those who sleep with closed windows throughout the greater part of the year.—Dr. Sim Wallace in Medical Press.

Heart Troubles

The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes, stomach or other organs. It often happens that a person is born with a weak heart. Then again disease, fevers, over-exertion, anxiety, nervousness, rheumatism, etc. weaken the heart. The result is shortness of breath, palpitation, pain in the heart, or in some of the nerves of the chest or abdomen. The heart should be strengthened with a tonic, and for this nothing equals Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

"I had LaGrippe last fall as I thought in a mild form. I was weak, tired feeling, and short of breath; could hardly go about, and a good deal of the time sort of an asthmatic breathing and extremely nervous. I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine and now I feel so much better in every way. I am so thankful that I began taking this medicine, and shall not hesitate to tell others how much good it has done me."

THE MAD DUCHESS.

Lady Catherine Hyde and Her Eccentricities of Dress.

Lady Catherine Hyde was the third daughter of Henry, second earl of Rochester and fourth earl of Clarendon, and a great-granddaughter of Edward, the first and famous earl of Clarendon. * * * One of the strongest of her caprices was to be unlike other people, and she succeeded admirably in the attempt. Bolingbroke nicknamed her "La Singularite;" Horace Walpole, more bluntly, "the Mad Duchess." This oddity was specially displayed in her dress. In 1747, after a good deal of intriguing, she had obtained permission to appear again at court, and in 1763 Horace Walpole tells Lord Hertford that she presented herself there in a gown and petticoat of red flannel. Making all allowance for male ignorance on such a subject and Walpole's tendency to embroider a story, it is beyond doubt that she deliberately courted the peculiar in her costume. She was fond of wearing an apron and appeared in one at court after this garment had been forbidden at the royal drawing rooms. Her entrance being opposed by one of the lords in waiting, she tore it off, threw it in his face and walked on. Beau Nash on a similar occasion took the law into his own hands, for when she attempted to enter the ballroom at Bath wearing an apron he promptly stripped it off and threw it among the ladies' maids, observing that none but Abigails appeared in white aprons. It was her fancy as she grew older to disregard the changes of fashion and to adhere obstinately to the dress of her younger days. Her attire at times was so weird that Lord Cornbury wrote, "She has been called 'sir' upon the road above twenty times."—Nineteenth Century.

THE MARINER'S COMPASS.

Influences That Draw It From Its Allegiance to the Pole.

Nothing in the navigational equipment of a ship has been the subject of more anxious research or receives more jealous care than the mariner's compass.

The popular notion of the compass needle always pointing north and south is—well, more inaccurate than even popular notions usually are. Even under the most favorable conditions there are only certain places upon the surface of the earth where the compass needle does point north and south, and it is quite safe to say that such conditions are never found on board of any ship.

But we must go further and say that no more unfavorable position could be found for a compass than on board of a modern steamship, which is a complicated mass of steel, all tending to draw the compass needle from its allegiance to the magnetic pole of the earth, warring influences which must needs be counteracted by all sorts of devices which hedge round the instrument by an invisible wall of conflicting currents of magnetism.

And as if this were not enough there are now huge dynamos to be reckoned with, producing electric currents for all sorts of purposes on board. In the midst of these mystic currents the poor little compass needle, upon which the mariner depends for his guide across the trackless deep, hangs suspended like one shrinking saint surrounded by legions of devils.—Windsor Magazine.

Martian Life Dying.

A sadder interest attaches to such existence—that it is, cosmically speaking, soon to pass away. To our eventual descendants life on Mars will no longer be something to scan and interpret. It will have lapsed beyond the hope of study or recall. Thus to us it takes on an added glamour from the fact that it has not long to last, for the process that brought it to its present pass must go on to the bitter end until the last spark of Martian life goes out. The drying up of the planet is certain to proceed until its surface can support no life at all. Slowly, but surely, time will snuff it out. When the last ember is thus extinguished the planet will roll a dead world through space, its evolutionary career forever ended.—Professor Lowell in Century.

Great City For Prayer.

A visitor to Moscow soon discovers why it is called the Holy City. Every 200 or 300 feet there is a cathedral, church, chapel or shrine, and whichever way you look you see people crossing themselves. Until one has seen Moscow the piety of the place is not easily understood. The outsider cannot imagine Moscow conditions. He cannot imagine church bells ringing all the time and people praying in the public streets at all hours of day and night.

Cause of the Row.

Mrs. Popley — For goodness' sake! What's the matter with Tommy?

Mr. Popley (from the bathroom)—Oh, he wants the earth!

Mrs. Popley—Wants the earth?

Mr. Popley—Yes. At least that portion of it that I'm trying to wash off his hands and face.—Catholic Standard and Times.

A LITTLE ONE SIDED.

An Exchange of Presents That Was Not Wholly Satisfactory.

John Mitchell, the labor leader, was discussing on one occasion a labor struggle of the past.

"You see, they didn't give us a fair deal," he said. "It looked fair on its face, but really it was like the deal of Percy Barr of Braidwood.

"Harvey Barr, a successful lawyer, had a wonderful talent for getting the best of people. Even at home he kept this talent in play. His wife said to him one morning:

"'Harvey, dear, this is the fifteenth anniversary of our wedding. What are you going to give me?'

"'This is what I am going to give you,' Harvey answered affectionately, and he handed his wife $15 in crisp, fresh bills.

"'Oh, thank you! And what shall I give you?' the gratified wife asked.

"'That meerschaum pipe I've been admiring so long,' Harvey promptly announced.

"In the evening on his return home the pipe awaited him. It had cost just $15. He lit up and began to color it carefully. But as the evening wore on his wife seemed ill at ease.

"'Where is my present, Harvey?' she said at last fretfully.

"'Why, my dear,' Harvey explained, 'you gave me a pipe. I gave you $15. Don't you see? We're just even.'"—St. Louis Republic.

BIRDS' TONGUES.

Why the Parrot Is Able to Imitate Human Speech.

One of the government naturalists at Washington has recently gathered some fresh information concerning the tongues of birds.

Many people suppose that woodpeckers use their sharp pointed tongues as darts with which to transfix their prey. It is true that the woodpecker, like the humming bird, can dart out its tongue with astonishing rapidity and that its mouth is furnished with an elaborate mechanism for this purpose, yet, according to the authority mentioned, investigation shows that the object of this swift motion is only to catch the prey, not to pierce it. For the purpose of holding the captured victim the woodpecker's tongue is furnished with a sticky secretion.

Considering its powers of imitating speech, it is not surprising to learn that the parrot's tongue resembles that of man more closely than any other bird's. It is not because the parrot is more intelligent than the other birds, but because its tongue is better suited for articulation than theirs, that it is able to amuse us with its mimicry.

The humming bird's tongue is in some respects the most remarkable of all. It is double nearly from end to end, so that the little bird is able to grasp its insect prey with its tongue much as if its mouth was furnished with a pair of fingers.—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE ANT EATER.

A Harmless Animal That Will Fight Hard When at Bay.

A peculiar looking animal is the ant eater, which is closely allied to the sloth family. Its head is drawn out into a long, tubular muzzle, at the end of which is a tiny mouth just big enough to permit the exit of its long, wormlike tongue, which is covered with a sticky saliva.

This tongue is thrust among the hosts of ants with great rapidity, coming back laden with the tiny insects. To obtain its prey the ant eater breaks open the ant hills, when all the active inhabitants swarm to the breach and are instantaneously swept away by the remorseless tongue.

The jaws of the ant eater are entirely without teeth, and the eyes and ears are very small.

There are several species of ant eater, the largest kind being about four feet long and having a tail covered with very long hair, forming a huge brush. The claw on the third toe of each fore limb is of great size and is used for breaking open ants' and other insects' nests.

Generally speaking, the ant eater is a harmless animal, but at times when at bay it will fight with great courage, sitting up on its hind legs and hugging its foe with its powerful arms.—London Express.
